

ABSTRACT

Methods for screening for altered focal proliferation states in non-pregnant patients, which include detecting levels of pregnancy-associated plasma protein-A (PAPP-A) are described. Methods for identifying agents that alter the protease activity of PAPP-A, and 5 pharmaceutical compositions and medical devices that include such agents are also described.